It was an historical masterpiece as well as a thrilling motion picture that David Wark Griffith set about creating when he producset about creating when he producde "Scarlet Days," his new production to be seen this week at Loew's Palace Theater. He aimed to tell the glowing story of the old California of the days of '49, portraying on the screen what Bret Harte has so entertainingly told in fiction.
With this end in view, Mr. Griffith journeyed with his company to old Tuolumne, a deserted mining town which in its palmy days was two miles of miners' huts, saloens, and dance halls. Amid the ruins the eminent producer recreated the old
